The screenshot shows a OneNote application window titled "Geometry" by "Aimee Owens". The interface includes a ribbon with "Home", "Insert", "Draw", and "View" tabs. A table of contents on the left lists sections like "Welcome", "Collaboration Space", "Content Library", "Handouts", "Class Notes", "Homework", and "Quizzes". The "3-D equations" section is highlighted. The main content area displays four 3D diagrams with their respective volume formulas: a cube with side length  $s$  and volume  $V=s^3$ ; a circular cone with radius  $r$  and height  $h$  and volume  $V=\frac{1}{3}\pi r^2 h$ ; a sphere with radius  $r$  and diameter  $d$ ; and a rectangular prism with length  $b$ , width  $c$ , and height  $h$ . On the left side of the image, three labels with lines pointing to the table of contents are: "Notebooks" pointing to the notebook list, "Sections" pointing to the section list, and "Pages" pointing to the page list.
